3. Planning

"Scrap Prescott's Plans" and build in Gateway. Plans by John Prescott to concrete over large areas of the South East should be scrapped and millions of new homes built instead in London and along the Thames. Sir Terry Farrell, the international architect who advises the Thames Gateway Development Corporation, told ministers that there is room for millions of homes in the area between the East End of London and Dartford, Kent, and that Government plans for the area "lack vision". CPRE's Thames Gateway project leader Nigel Kersey said: "There are now widespread misgivings about the wisdom, feasibility and cost of the Government's sustainable communities plans for massive housing development in the South East. Only the Thames Gateway offers the Government an honourable way out..." Daily Telegraph: <http://tinyurl.com/n5yae>. The Times: <http://tinyurl.com/qs38c>; <http://tinyurl.com/hkz6g>.

Diamonds bid. Nine cities and towns in the South East made a pitch for growth and investment as "diamonds" under the Regional Economic Strategy. Keith Mitchell emphasised that they needed to work with smaller towns. <http://tinyurl.com/gp6vv>

Infrastructure. SEERA has published its research on infrastructure needs in the South East. <http://tinyurl.com/l6n6t>

Good design. Ruth Kelly has called on developers and local authorities to give greater emphasis to good design. All but very minor planning applications will require a statement of design and access principles. <http://tinyurl.com/nuf4t>

Adverts out, flags in. Laws limiting the display of national flags are to be scrapped. Planning Minister Yvette Cooper also urged councils to take a tough stance against those who try to get around planning rules by putting unauthorised adverts in fields. She also called on councils to work closely with the Highways Agency to ensure that roadside advertising is appropriate to the landscape and does not pose a hazard to those using the roads. Sustainable Communities Bill. 334 MPs have signed a Parliamentary Early Day Motion supporting the bill, which would require the government to assist councils and communities in promoting local sustainability and enable the promotion of local economies and local services and facilities. Local MPs Andrew Smith and Boris Johnson have not signed: <http://tinyurl.com/z6c5c>

The Commons Act received Royal Assent and a National Commons Stakeholder Group will be set up by Defra. <http://tinyurl.com/luk6o>. The implications of the Bill and a recent House of Lords ruling in Oxford are reviewed here: <http://tinyurl.com/q2vwq>

6. Nuclear waste disposal

The Committee set up to look at waste disposals (CORWM) has made 15 recommendations, including suggesting that regions could get better infrastructure and services for hosting the repository. One site/region could host current waste, but up to four more repositories would be needed if the government goes ahead with new nuclear plants. There are three main recommendations:

- ◆ Deep storage. Geological disposal as the best option for the long-term management for the UK's higher activity radioactive waste.
- ◆ Short-term storage. A continued commitment to the safe and secure interim storage of the waste during the period it will take to plan and construct the geological disposal facility.
- ◆ Regions should compete to host the facility. In return for housing the repository, the winning region would receive compensation through improved roads, schools, better emergency services and health monitoring.
